SPECIAL FELLOWSHIPS
The National Intelligence Fellowship
This fellowship provides an opportunity for an outstanding person from the U.S. intelligence community on the cusp of a senior position to expand his or her knowledge of international relations through study, research and reflection, extensive participation in the Council’s program of meetings and study groups, and interaction with the Council’s diverse and knowledgeable members. The 2006–2007 National Intelligence Fellow was Karen J. Monaghan.

The Military Fellowships
Each year, the chief of staff of each military service nominates an outstanding candidate for a military fellowship. These fellowships enable officers to broaden their understanding of international affairs and U.S. foreign policy by spending a year in residence at the Council. Fellows participate in Council programs, engage in research, and arrange several politico-military trips for Council members. The military fellows for 2006–2007 were Colonel Steven W. Busby, U.S. Marine Corps; Colonel James L. Creighton, U.S. Army; Captain Thomas J. Culora, U.S. Navy; and Colonel John F. Newell III, U.S. Air Force.

Douglas Dillon Fellowship
Each year, the Council names one of its younger fellows the Dillon Fellow, in honor of former Council vice chairman Douglas Dillon. Such fellows typically combine a keen understanding of economics with cutting-edge policy research in a given field, leading to several major published articles or a book during their fellowship tenure. The current Dillon Fellow is Steven A. Cook.

Cyrus R. Vance Fellowship in Diplomatic Studies
The Vance Fellowship is offered to a foreign service officer chosen by a selection committee from candidates nominated by the U.S. Department of State.
