Launched in 1967, the International Affairs Fellowship (IAF) program seeks to bridge the gap between analysis and action in foreign policy by inviting individuals from the academic, business, government, media, and religious communities to engage in a variety of policy studies and actively participate in policymaking. The distinctive character of the program lies in the contrasting experiences it provides at the juncture of policy research and policy formulation. Private-sector professionals and academics spend fellowship tenures in public service or a policymaking setting, and government officials have the opportunity to study foreign policy issues in a scholarly atmosphere free from operational pressure. Fellows are placed at various institutions for a period of one year.

CFR also offers two country-specific fellowships that are open to U.S. citizens between the ages of twenty-seven and forty-five:

IAF in Japan, sponsored by Hitachi, Ltd., seeks to strengthen the U.S.-Japan relationship by expanding American understanding of Japan and enhancing communication between American and Japanese citizens on various common issues. Founded in 1997, the program provides fellows with the opportunity to carry out research for a period of up to one year while affiliated with an appropriate institution in Japan.
